GOOD PICTURES ECHEDULED ELBA THEATRE PROGRAM

Tonight at the Elba Theatre, a classic of the screen in which a brilliant array of stars and the midshipmen from the U. S. Naval Academy are cast, will be featured for the last time, when "Annapolis Farewell," starring Sir Guy Standing, Richard Cromwell, Rosalind Keith, Tom Brown and numerous other stars will be presented. "Annapolis Farewell" was one of the leading pictures for 1935 and will furnish excellent entertainment.

"The Judgment Book," starring Conway Tearle, Bernadine Hayes and Howard H. Lang, will be featured Friday and Saturday, together with the 12th installment of the Tom Mix Serial, "The Miracle Rider."

"Two For Tonight," Bing Crosby's greatest screen hit, will be at the Elba Theatre Sunday at 2:00 and 8:30 p.m. and Monday night at 7:30 o'clock. Bing and Joan Bennett, The "Mississippi" sweethearts, are together again in a rollicking big time musical show with five hit tunes. Included in the cast are Bing Crosby, Joan Bennett, Mary Boland, Thelma Todd and Lynne Overman.

Cary Grant, Claude Rains and Gertrude Michael are brought together in a fascinating screen hit next Wednesday and Thursday in "The Last Outpost," one of the most popular shows of the season, in which a thrilling plot and excellent acting are combined to furnish the best entertainment.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH NURSE

The public health nurse is a constructive force for the betterment of the individual, the family and the community health. Her work has two aspects: It is educational and preventive. At a home a simple tasc to uproot habits which have become deeply entrenched, especially when they are to be supplanted by other habits which are known to be less convenient or comfortable. Here is the public health nurse's first opportunity and responsibility—to explain and demonstrate to individuals the principle of personal hygiene that will then apply it in their every-day living in their homes and schools and their workshops.

Her second function is that of prevention of disease through early recognition of symptoms and thru persuading men and women to seek medical advice before the ills of the flesh become hopelessly advanced. Preventive measures include the supervision of the health of babies and pre-school children, efforts to have the physical defects of children diagnosed and corrected, to assist in improving the sanitary conditions of homes and school buildings, to find undiscovered cases of tuberculosis, scarlet fever and other communicable diseases, and to stimulate the acceptance of protective measures as the prevention of diphtheria, scarlet fever, typhoid fever and other diseases. These and many other preventive activities are part of her daily routine.

In some organizations the public health nurse gives actual nursing care but where we only have one nurse and a large county it would be impossible to offer nursing care to the sick and she is able to demonstrate sick-room hygiene in cases of typhoid or other communicable diseases. The nurse as a factor in the health education of the community, through lectures, classes, exhibits and other similar means which she may employ for attracting the public attention—all in the cause of better personal and public health.

Public health nurses are usually employed in the local health organizations but this means soon outlay, either by the taxpayers or voluntary community group; in the same way it means an outlay for the business man to have a lawyer to keep him clear of the courts. Let us repeat and emphasize man's PREVENTION PAYS IN THE END, AND PAYS WELL.

NINA NEWTON,
County Nurse.

Miss Henrietta Coston of Troy was the week-end guest of her mother, Mrs. W. H. Coston.

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Marley spent the week-end in Brundidge with Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Marley.

Lady Took Cardui When Weak, Nervous

"I can't say enough for Cardui if I talked all day," enthusiastically writes Mrs. L. H. Caldwell, of Statesville, N. C. "I have used Cardui at intervals for twenty-five years," she adds. "My trouble in the beginning was weakness and nervousness. I read of Cardui in a newspaper and decided right then to try it. It seemed before I had taken half a bottle of Cardui I was stronger and was soon up and around."

Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

IT WAS "HAPPY BIRTHDAY" FOR MRS. BRYANT—

All of us do not know what "happy birthday" means in the different languages, but we imagine Mrs. Carrie Bryant knows what it means in plain English, because she heard it many times Saturday.

Mrs. Bryant was entertained with a surprise birthday celebration at her home on Saturday afternoon, February 29th, by members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church. It was only her 17th birthday, but sixty-eighth year.

Friends met at the home of Mrs. W. J. Hughes, each person bringing refreshments for this happy event, later went to the home of the honoree. Upon arrival everyone shouted birthday greetings. Mrs. Bryant was overcome with joy and appreciation.

An arrangement of colorful flowers formed the decorations of the living room.

There were stunts and games—yes, games with much merriment, for no outbursts of laughter echoed through the house, especially when Mrs. Bryant had to stand on one foot and recite "Mary Had A Little Lamb" also when Mrs. J. M. Folsom and Mrs. R. L. Cooper sang a duet, "Rock-A-Bye Baby." Mrs. Miriam Wise and Mrs. J. M. Garrett and Mrs. Levy Morrow, when they had to "say" a different recitation at the same time, namely, "Jack and Jill," and "Twinks, Twinks Little Star." Mrs. W. R. Crook and Mrs. Gordon Prescott brought a storm of applause when they stood before Mrs. Bryant and sang "Happy Birthday To You."

Mrs. Bryant was the recipient of many lovely and useful gifts, among them a beautiful birthday cake topped with 17 candles with decorations of pink flowers from the Missionary Society, a lovely memory book from Mrs. W. R. Crook, designed and made by her. In this book each guest was asked to register and write a birthday wish. Late in the afternoon delicious refreshments were served. Guests other than members included Mrs. J. M. Folsom, Mrs. W. J. Hamm and Mrs. R. C. Bryan.

County Teachers Vote To Close Schools In Meeting Held At Elba Saturday

Coffee County elementary schools were closed last Friday because sufficient revenue has not been provided by the State of Alabama. Teachers met pupils on Monday morning with this announcement and sent them back home.

Teachers in the schools voted "no" on a proposal to continue the schools "on faith" until the outcome of proposed legislation was learned. That is to say a majority of teachers are against continuation if it is said that 56 teachers voted no on the proposal, 27 voted to continue and a number did not express themselves.

The action was taken at a county-wide teachers' meeting held in Elba Saturday. Funds for running the schools were exhausted with the week ending Friday. Directors of the Teachers' Association held a meeting last Wednesday and ordered the meeting Saturday to ascertain the wishes of the teachers.

The elementary schools have completed five months and three weeks of the eight-months seven months term. Accredited high schools will close on April 10th, according to announcement made several days ago by Supt. W. A. Sisson; minor arrangements are made for further revenue. At that time the high schools will have completed seven months and three weeks.

There are four accredited high schools in the county, namely: Coffee County High at Enterprise, New Brockton, Elba, and Kinston. Elementary schools in Enterprise will continue for an indefinite period, according to announcement, and it has been stated in Elba that the elementary school will continue for a few weeks longer.

Approximately 138 teachers employed in the county elementary schools are now without positions, and prospects are very dim for any immediate relief. It is estimated that more than 4,000 children in the rural sections are affected and will be deprived of the advantages that should be theirs.

ONE MORE WEEK AND OTHER NAMES WILL BE CUT OFF

The Clipper has tried to give fair notice to all delinquent subscribers that we intend dropping their names from the list unless we receive remittance sufficient to put these accounts on good shape, and this is just a reminder that only one more issue of the paper will be mailed to delinquents.

March 20 is the day set as the dead line, and we positively mean that all names in arrears will go off the list at that time. In the first place it is a matter of the postal regulations for us to continue sending out papers which have not been paid for. In the second place, subscriptions are CASH IN ADVANCE—that has been the policy of the paper ever since it was founded. However, we have allowed many to run during the past few years on account of business conditions. In the third place, we are not financially able to print and mail out the paper on credit. If we did there are a lot of people who would take it out of their mail boxes, read it and never pay one penny for it. We know this from experience and still have the records on file in our office.

If you want the paper, you will not neglect your renewal any longer. Unless you have paid up and are now ahead, remember that this paper and one next week is all you will receive.

TRIP TO CUBA OFFERS FINE OUTING FOR ONE WEEK

The trip to Havana, Cuba, which will be made by the Alabama Press Association in June will be one of the finest short vacation trips ever arranged. And the best part of it is that others besides members of the press have been invited to join the party, at the unusually low price of $73.15 for the all-expense trip.

This low price includes railroad fare, meals on trains, boat fare and meals on boat, hotel accommodations including meals, and sight-seeing trips, besides many other entertainment features. The party will leave Montgomery Sunday morning, June 14, at 7:00 o'clock, on a special train, and will be met at Tampa in about half the usual time, having the boat before night to make the 24-hour trip to Havana. Returning the party will leave Havana some time Friday and will reach Montgomery Saturday night.

This trip would ordinarily cost twice the price named above, and this low rate is made as a special concession, to the Alabama Press Association and its friends. Indications are that a large crowd will make the trip, and those who wish to make reservations should get them at the earliest date possible.

The Clipper is offering a free trip to some one in the county who wants to do a little work in securing new and renewal subscription soliciting, and we shall be glad to give full details if you will call at the office or write us, addressing your letter to the editor.

EVIDENCES OF RECOVERY

The best index to the state of business confidence at any time is the values which are placed upon stocks and bonds by the buyers and sellers on the New York Stock Exchange. That is not to say that the prices at which stocks sell always reflect the actual values behind them. What they do reflect definitely, however is the belief of the business community as to whether business is improving, so that the stocks which they buy will have a higher value, or whether it is failing off, in which case they sell their stocks, fearing that they will diminish in value.

Up to the end of February in this year there had been 11 consecutive calendar months of advancing prices of securities on the nation's Stock Exchange. Since the rise began, in March last year, the average price of 50 representative stocks moved upward from $77.92 to $120.21 a share. Two years ago every bank in the United States was closed. Since that time the increase in the average price of stocks has been 136 per cent.

Last year on all of the registered national security exchanges 661 million shares of stocks changed hands. It is foolish to regard these stock transactions as pure gambling. A fair percentage of stock trading is done by speculators, but the vast majority of these transactions are purchases by investors of dividend-paying securities, which enable them to earn more than bank interest on their surplus funds. They buy stocks and bonds rather than real estate because of the existence of the stock exchanges, providing an open market in which any listed security can always be sold immediately at a price.

The very best evidence of a genuine business recovery, and that the world of business believes in it, is the evidence provided by the record of stock exchanges during the past eleven months.

THOSE AMAZING JAPANESE

To the American mind nothing that has occurred in recent years has been so amazing as the story from Japan of the assassination of several of the nation's high officials by hot-headed young army officers. The workings of the Oriental mind are beyond the power of most of us to follow. Apparently the soldiers who slew their statesmen were merely trying to protest against the anti-militaristic policy of the government, which has attempted to restrain the army's activities in Manchuria and Mongolia. It was a demonstration against the growing control of Japan by industry and finance, instead of by the military caste. The leaders of the movement regard themselves as patriots bent on restoring the ancient system.

One authentic tale of true heroism comes over the cables. The assassins were reported to have killed the premier of Japan, Kesuke Okada. Three days later Premier Okada turned up, alive and unharmed. The man whom the rebels had killed at his house was his brother-in-law secretary, Col. Denzo Matsuo, who looked very much like the premier that, when he offered himself for sacrifice there was no doubt about his identity. That incident reveals another phase of the Oriental mind, its indifference to human life, even its own.

Altogether, the Japanese episode suggests that the nation is far from being a unit in its aggressive policy of conquest on the Asiatic mainland.

FARMERS WARNED NOT TURN WINTER LEGUMES TOO EARLY

AUBURN, Ala.—Winter legumes—hairy vetch and Austrian winter peas—should not be turned too early. This is especially true this year, due to the small growth because of cold weather during the winter months, says J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist.

With the coming of warm weather the legumes will immediately begin making rapid growth and will soon be large enough to add sufficient nitrogen for corn or cotton.

One ton of coal is said to be equivalent to two cords of wood for fuel purposes.

FARMER JONES AND HIS COW PEN

By JUDGE W. M. BRUNSON

Did you ever hear of timber? There is a man in my county who is a timber farmer. If he doesn't know it you probably do not use such a term. The day is not far distant when you will hear of such terms as farmers or timber growers. It is my prediction that within twenty years timber will be as valuable as a fabulous price. At that time a log will be saleable at most any store and it will bring a nice price. The day is soon coming when you can take a log to town with you and sell it as you do a log today. When that day comes we shall have timber farmers or timber growers who will be looked upon as men who study the art of growing timber at a profit. The day is soon to come when we shall go out on our land and cut all the crooked and undesirable trees in our woods. The day is soon to come when no man will permit fire in his woods or permit cattle to destroy the young timber. I believe that you will agree with me that we shall soon see such a time or day. Then, it is going to be so profitable to the farmer of 25 years hence, why will it not pay you a man to begin now in the proper growing and protection of our timber? It requires many years of time to grow a nice tree large enough for the sawmill. I am convinced that it is better thing than to prepare a piece of timber land for the production of timber. Second growth must have timber and they will need room to grow and there will be many more of them. I would like to prepare about 20 acres of land for each of my 20 years for the timber to grow. A new father will prepare for his children. We should think of the future as it will come to our children. I am sure that many more will be known as timber farmers or timber growers, because there men will be in demand. If we would properly protect our timber we could sell from it all the time and not materially reduce the tract. If you had 200 acres of timber which and taken protected from the fire it would be possible for you to cut and remove a quantity of trees each year. As you cut the grown trees the young ones would take their place. The tops could and should be left on the ground for sale. Just think how many trees you could sell from a 200-acre tract each year. If you will start you might be the first timber farmer in your section. I feel sure the first timber farmer should be independent. You can do it.

* * * * * *

I have told you about growing and protecting timber for summer coal, but I doubt that you have done the first thing in an effort to make this cash. Please let me insist that you begin today and try this plan one time and I shall go over the entire plan again, but you can probably find your old paper if you do not recall just how it is done. The thing which I wish to do today is to get you interested in the plan to the extent that you will get busy and try a patch. Two acres of white dent corn should produce at least 50 bushels of corn, which is worth to you not less than $50.00 during the month of July. At least one man in each community should follow this game regularly. In addition to the new corn and the money received you will have the stalks and nubbins for feed. If you plant peas, peanuts or cotton in the corn you will have that much extra. If you do not plant anything with the corn you will still have the patch for an early grazing patch for your hogs or stock. It will pay you and will pay you well if you will only try it.

I farmed for about 20 years before I learned the art of saving my corn. For many years I would haul my corn in and begin feeding on it the very day I brought it in. Sometimes I would begin feeding new corn from the field before it was gathered. In those days it took about 150 bushels of corn to the plow and unless we were a little careful we would sell have enough to get by on. I find that I can now make a crop with 50 bushels of corn to the mule. I mean that much dry corn. Our strawberry corn is ready to feed on by the middle of June. By the end of June it is getting dry enough to be used by the working mules. By the middle of July we have sorghum and peas ready. Citrons and potatoes are also ready by the middle of July and we do not use dry corn while we have this green feed. We use hay, green feed and pastures until frost kills off and after frost we rely mostly upon peanut hay. We use just a small amount of corn for a change. We do not feel corn again until how much chicken yard is to be found on your place and I'll come pretty near telling you how many patches are to be found on your every-day pants. Or if you will let me how many chicken coops you have I'll come pretty near telling you how many patches are on the seat of your work trousers. Some of us think we are fooling the world but we are generally fooling ourselves instead. The officer fellow is about as sharp as we are and he generally knows more about us than he should know. I long to see the day when every family in this section will have a real chicken yard full of well-bred chickens and a feed house filled with home grown feed. As soon as we learn to raise our own feed and then raise chickens to consume that feed we shall be getting somewhere in the poultry business. Each community is about as prosperous as the chickens will indicate. You might look your family and your chickens over and judge your condition.

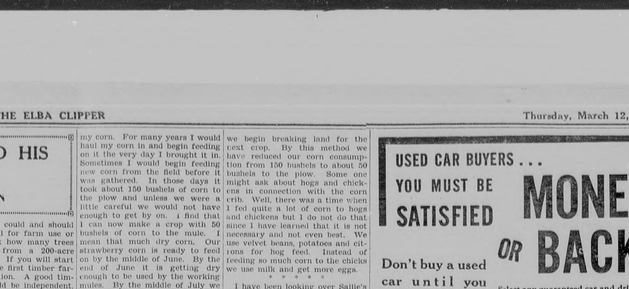
"NO RUST IN MY COTTON"



I used 10% POTASH and made 92 BALES on 85 ACRES"

says J. H. Nexen Kingstree, S. C.

"I made 92 bales on 85 acres last year," says J. H. NEXEN. "I used 10% potash in my fertilizer, part of the potash at planting and the rest as a top-dresser. My crop was completely free of Rust. It produced large bolls, easy to pick. There's a lot of Rust in this territory but plenty of potash prevents it. Part of my cotton made 2,625 pounds of seed cotton per acre after losing some in the storm. I used extra potash on my tobacco and made the best crop ever produced in this section."

IT IS EASY to understand why NV POTASH greatly increases yields when you realize that Rust often reduces yields by 20% without showing signs that are easily visible in the field. Bad Rust reduces yields by 50% or even more. When you PREVENT RUST you give your cotton a chance to do its best.

NV POTASH PREVENTS RUST! It also helps control Wilt and produces vigorous, healthy plants, with less shedding, larger bolls that are easier to pick and better yields of uniform, high-quality lint. It helps you to get greater benefits from the other elements in your fertilizer.

Remember, Rust is the last stage of potash starvation. Rusty cotton plants are weak with hunger for potash. A little potash is not enough to prevent this starved condition. You must make sure you use enough to produce a healthy, high-yielding, high-quality crop.

WHEN YOU PLANT: Select and use fertilizer containing 8 to 10% potash. You will be surprised at the very low extra cost of this better-balanced fertilizer.

WHEN YOU CHOP OUT: Top-dress with 200 pounds of NV High-grade 20% Kainit, or 100 pounds of NV Granular 50% Muriate per acre. When you buy Kainit or Muriate, or any form of potash, ask for and get genuine NV POTASH, the same potash that Southern farmers have used for more than 50 years.

IT COSTS LITTLE to make sure you are using plenty of NV POTASH. The extra cost usually amounts to only a few extra pounds of seed cotton per acre. Yet many farmers have found that extra potash greatly increases yields and improves crop quality. It Pays! N. V. POTASH EXPORT MY., Inc., Hurt Bldg., ATLANTA

DOCTORS KNOW

Mothers read this:

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

Why do people come home from a hospital with bowels working like a well-regulated watch?

The answer is simple, and it's the answer to all your bowel worries if you will only realize it: many doctors and hospitals use a liquid laxative.

If you knew what a doctor knows, you would use only the liquid form. A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the secret of any real relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular liquid laxatives have become. They give the right kind of help, and right amount of help. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara — both natural laxatives that can form no habit, even in children. So, try Syrup Pepsin. You just take regulated doses till Nature restores regularity.

SEVENTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS: . . . A luxurious five-month cruise around the world aboard the "Marenia" brings together a group of passengers for adventures, romantic, entertaining . . . and tragic. . . . Like in "Grand Hotel" these passengers offer a study in human actions and reactions which unconsciously bare their souls. . . . These characters are aboard the ship: Macduff, sour Scotchman, single, of middle age; Miss Mudge, school teacher, spending the savings of 20 years; Angela, faithful wife of Loval, gigolo; Dick Charlton, first officer; Clare, a person of experience; Joan, a dissipated flapper; Jenny, run-away wife, and Peter; Captain Baring, master of the ship and his soul. . . . NOW, GO ON WITH THE STORY.

Clare was ducking through the curtain into her stateroom, her dark head turned over her shoulder, invitation on her lips. Peter was at her heels. Jenny could see his back as he bent his head to go under the curtain. His hand shot out and caught at his companion's upper arm as he disappeared from view. Jenny closed her eyes and clutched at her heart. She had not believed it possible, in spite of Peter's recent coolness. Her face went white as she stood in the corridor, weakly clutching the hand-rail. A door lurched and her feet moved mechanically along the linoleum-covered corridor seeking the hand she must be walking like an absent-mindedly. Now she had arrived at her own stateroom. She waited under the curtain and hooked the door.

Jenny lay down on her bed and covered her eyes with fingers that fluttered nervously. Her throat was swelling till she thought she would choke. It couldn't be possible—not now, so soon. They had been together only two months. She had run away for a lifetime, believing that Peter loved her enough to forgive her all regret, and now it was like this, with a cheap woman on the boat. "What a blind fool I've been!" she thought. "He can't have loved me at all, not for a minute. But it isn't his fault. I brought it on myself.

* * * *

Dick was dancing with Patty under pleated lanterns that swayed like drunken sailors. She looked like a puff-ball in a cascade of white chiffon. Hard to believe that she was the thin young thing who had slipped through the water at afternoon like a sharp blade.

"Patty, you're looking very sweet tonight," he told her, humming the waltz as he swung her around.

"And I could dance forever with you, Dick."

"It's the sky and the lanterns you like, silly infant."

"Now you're teasing."

"Honour bright, I'm not." The waltz came to an end and they sat down.

"I think the boat's getting a little dull," said Patty suddenly.

Dick laughed.

"Wait till it were," he said.

"Why, what's going on?"

"Plenty, Patty. You don't suppose that everything's as smooth as it looks on the promenade deck. You don't even believe that the men down below go calmly along, week after week, in this efficient ship, without disturbance. We had one man try to stab another today, and the chef threw the carving-knife at a pantry boy last Wednesday, and men fall sick and in love and behave like a lot of puppies generally."

"Really, I'm amazed," said Patty. "Everything seems so orderly and serene."

Dick laughed. "Well, I'm glad it looks that way. Did you notice the boat slow down in the middle of the night on Friday?"

"No. I was probably sound asleep."

"That was to bury a member of the crew who died of malaria. And when we leave Ceylon we must slow down again to toss a wreath out at the spot where one of the cruise men was buried last year. He ate some bad food in India."

Patty shuddered. It had not occurred to her that the Marenia was anything but a peaceful pleasure boat.

But Dick was going on. "Don't forget that this is a village afloat, and not nearly so peaceful as the anchored variety. Do you want to know what's really going on around you among the passengers? In one stateroom a husband comes in late from a poker game each night and threatens to kill his wife. They're a blown-in-the-glass Cleveland who curse and swear at each other and are always drunk. We've had to go in and still them a few times. I think he'll murder her yet, when he gets drunk enough," continued Dick.

"And there's the little teacher who has been saving her pennies for twenty years to go around the world and now that she's on the boat, she's afraid she hasn't money enough to take her safely home. She doesn't go ashore by herself, because of the constant demand for tips and fees."

"It's Miss Mudge, isn't it?" interrupted Patty.

"Yes, since you've guessed it, and a very good sport, too."

"Then there's the man who's running away from his wife and is deluged with frantic radios every day. And the American whose fortune has shrunk from seven millions to blue ruin since he sailed. Haven't you seen him hanging around the stock-board? He faces bankruptcy and endless troubles when he gets back. And there's the spinster who filled her pockets with pebbles by the Sea of Galilee, and has fallen madly in love with the captain, who has never spoken a word to her."

"Oh, how thrilling!" cried Patty. "I never thought of it in that light. Do you always have things like this happen on a cruise?"

"Of course we do. This is a comparatively dull one so far. I've given you only the sketchiest idea of what takes place on a cruising boat. I call it ocean madness.

Roll a score of Atlantic crossings into one; add moonlight on Waikiki Beach, sunset on the Indian Ocean, night in Peking, cherry blossoms in Japan; fling together men and women away from their homes, their friends, the forces that impose restraint—and what have you?"

Patty lay awake for hours that night, thinking of the Marenia as a vast building with dozens of separate apartments and a little drama going on in each.

She imagined herself in his arms, dancing, while he leaned down to kiss her.

Down in 454 Miss Mudge was reading Conrad's "Typhoon," given her by the chief officer. She was elated at the end of another gale night. He had danced with her three times and sat out a tango. Every night was gala night on the Marenia, particularly since she had met Mr. Charlton, the first officer.

She lowered her book and delivered herself to the full enchantment of the personality of Mr. Charlton. Heavens! Miss Foster was making whoopee again. She had learned "making whoopee" from some of her gay companions, and she liked the sound of it now. It was so unlike Ohonto. Mr. Charlton roared with laughter every time she said it. Some nights things were rather quiet next door, with only one man in the room and nothing much in the way of noise except a clinking of glasses and an occasional burst of laughter. There must be a party going on tonight. She could hear the voices of at least three different men, and their hostess seemed to be feeling gay.

Miss Mudge wondered what it would be like to be surrounded by four different men, all of whom probably wanted to kiss one. The idea did not appeal to her so much as having one man in that mood. There must surely be very little point to public lovemaking. Things were quiet next door for a minute or two, and her thoughts flowed back to Mr. Charlton. She imagined herself in his arms, dancing with him, while he leaned down to kiss her cheek.

Miss Mudge sat up straight in bed as she heard Joan Foster's laughter come splintering through the partition.

"Let's throw him out," one of the men exclaimed. "It's time to break up, anyway. One more song and we'll leave little Joan to her beauty sleep."

Miss Mudge was sure that it was the voice of the man whose wife was ill.

They had all gone now, except the man who usually stayed longest. The conversation was pitched on a lower note, and there were long pauses when nothing was said at all.

At last she fell asleep, but not for long. Wakening with a sense of disturbance, she switched on the light over her bed to look at her watch. Half-past three and no movement next door! Miss Foster and her friend were singing at the pitch of their voices. A glass went smash and the song broke off.

Miss Mudge disappeared behind the clothes until only her hairpinned fringe showed. Miss Foster started the victrola, choosing the song, "I wonder who loved." As soon as it was finished, she put it on again. By the tenth time it was getting a little boring. An hour later the man stumbled out of the cabin. Still the victrola went on.

Miss Mudge was desperately tired. The girl must be mad. Sitting up in bed, she knocked heavily on the wall, but there was no reply except the shrilling of jazz in a glass. Seven o'clock and the music still went on, like a tireless hurdy-gurdy.

Worn out, Miss Mudge fell asleep at last. A noise wakened her at ten. The victrola was grinding the same refrain. At last she was angry. She would stand no more. She thumped loudly on the wall. The music stopped for a slow stop. Miss Foster flopped noisily on her bed.

Jenny was in a light-hearted mood when the Marenia anchored off Parkman in a thick heat haze. It was Saturday. So Jenny looked in high tension, and she talked with animation during the long three days Peter had been his old tender self. So far as she knew, he had seen nothing of Clare. Jenny was ashore, she wore a gay flowered frock of poppy silk and a wide straw hat.

"I'm happy today, Peter," she announced.

"They are you happy, Jenny?" His gaze was on her suddenly, and he caught her left hand in his right hand, turned it over and kissed the cupped palm. Jenny did not answer.

Peter brought out his cigarette case, a flat gold one, with his initials engraved in the corner. Jenny had always admired it, and she looked at it now, because it was connected with it, for he seemed to prize it more than any other thing he possessed. He had given it to her, and remarked: "Put it in your bag, Jenny."

"Why?"

"Because I want you to. It's something I'm extraordinarily fond of. Don't forget that."

"I won't, except to have your pockets picked in Bangkok."

"Perhaps I do."

He closed and locked and dropped it into her bag.

Leaving the train at Bangkok, they drove past trim white houses and through immaculate streets.

They boarded a launch and sailed up the Menam to the king's palace, slowly approaching the sacred cluster around it. The scene seemed to Jenny to have sprung full bloom from the pages of Hans Andersen. They walked past the devas, giant grotesques intended to frighten away the devils.

"I think when we choose our home in England, I should like a deva to guard my door," said Jenny, laughing at the spiked monsters.

They wandered through the courtyards of the compound. Jenny's face alight with interest, Peter was silent. She had rarely seen him look so handsome.

"It's nearly twelve o'clock," he remarked, breaking his silence to look at his wrist watch.

"As if time mattered in the least! I feel that this is a spot where hours have no meaning."

They went into the temple that held the Emerald Buddha. It was like going into a dark cave filled with gold and jewels. For several minutes they could see nothing but a filtered jade mist, for the sun was still in their eyes. Jenny leaned on her parasol and rested.

"Jenny darling!" said Peter, urgently.

"Yes?" She swung around in response to something in his voice.

He touched her hand and whispered: "It's nothing. It doesn't matter, but you're very helpless, aren't you, dear?"

She noticed that he looked a little strained, and that his hands were shaking.

"Without you I should be, Peter."

Find Out

From Your Doctor if the "Pain" Remedy You Take Is Safe.

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out, without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

Dr. HITCHCOCK'S LAXATIVE POWDER
"NATURE'S BEST ASSISTANT"

FLIRT, Field Champion

Homewood Flirtatious, White and Black Pointer Bitch, owned by H. M. Curry, Jr., Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

AMONG all the bird dogs in America, Homewood Flirtatious ("Flirt" for short) stands out the 1935 champion. At the National Championship Field Trial at Grand Junction, Tenn., Flirt proved her mettle. Speed, range, bird finds—Flirt had everything! One perfect creature in whom Nature put that delicate, natural balance of all the elements that make a champion.

The champion Flirt is Nature at her best—one of Nature's rarest masterpieces. She looks like other dogs—four legs, a head, a body, a tail, but she's not just a dog. She's a proud and proven champion—a champion in the field. Another dog may look a little like her—but he's still just a dog.

And here's another field champion, Natural Chilean Nitrate—another one of Nature's rarest masterpieces. Like the champion pointer, Natural Chilean has that proud and priceless gift—something over and beyond mere nitrogen—natural balance of the many fertilizer elements—the vital impurities—the Natural blend and balance that make a champion. That's the vital spark. That's why "Flirt" isn't just a dog. That's why Natural Chilean isn't just a fertilizer.

Natural Chilean contains almost two score of major and minor elements such as boron, magnesium, manganese, iodine, calcium, potassium, etc.—each a vital element in growth and healthy development of plants.

LOVELY MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER FOR MISS MADDOX—

The home of Mrs. B. S. Franklin was a novelty in its sectional attractions Friday afternoon, March 6, when the members of the Y. W. A. entertained at a miscellaneous shower from 3 to 5, complimenting Miss Gladys Maddox, a bride-elect.

Beautiful baskets of jonquils, hyacinths and sprays of spirea were used in profusion in decorations in the living room, dining room and the room where gifts were displayed, carrying out a color scheme of yellow and pink.

Miss Sara Nell Clark met the guests at the door and presented them to Mrs. B. S. Franklin, who stood at the head of the receiving line, with Miss Gladys Maddox, honoree; her mother, Mrs. Brace Maddox, and Mrs. Herman Gunter, aunt of the groom. Mrs. Elmer Gunter, Mrs. Arlo Peacock, Mrs. Grover Hudson and Mrs. Hartow Maddox, all of New Brockton, and Mrs. Kimmey Farris.

Mrs. L. L. Farris ushered the guests to the bride's table, presided over by Miss Pasteen Maddox, sister of the bride, and then on to the gift room where Miss Nora Bullock and Miss Nela Mae Maddox presided. Many lovely gifts, attesting the popularity of the bride, were attractively displayed.

In the dining room, Miss Ruby Spurlin, Miss Anne Windham and Miss Lois Gunter, of New Brockton, poured coca-cola punch, with almond-rock mints and yellow and pink sandwiches from a reptoire lace-covered table, decorated with baskets of flowers and yellow candles.

The bride wore a beautiful spring ensemble of French blue with matching accessories. About 100 guests called during the afternoon.

Get Rid of Poisons

Produced by Constipation

A cleansing laxative—purely vegetable Black-Draught—is the first thought of thousands of men and women who have found that by restoring the downward movement of the bowels many disagreeable symptoms of constipation promptly can be relieved. . . Mr. F. P. Mahaffey, of Clinton, S. C., writes: "I have found that Black-Draught is very effective in the cleaning of the system. When affected by the dull headache the following day, I usually resort to constipation. I take Black-Draught."

PREVENTIVE MEDICINE

Preventive medicine represents a new development. Our field of health. And this new development is growing more and more important as years pass. The practice of preventive medicine is composed of many phases. The phase most appreciated by the laity, the general public, involves the use of vaccines, serums, antitoxins, etc.

In this particular branch of this prevention we can through the use of smallpox vaccination prevent the disease of smallpox. By the use of serums we can practically eradicate diphtheria. And of typhoid vaccine is injected every two years in our country people that could assist in keeping typhoid fever away.

Preventive medicine has other phases equally as important. Modern medicine is not content merely to prevent disease. Our aim in this work aside from "prevention" is aiding the individual to develop his native capacities, both physical and mental, so that those capacities can, through proper nutrition to the fullest and best advantage. From preventive medicine is concerned with the proper nutrition and hygiene of the pregnant woman. Aside from that it concerns itself with care, food, and environment of the infant.

Preventive medicine is extremely interested in the prevention of rickets, in the prevention of decayed teeth, and in the prevention of all avoidable mild diseases and ailments, such as indigestion, colds, as diarrhea, constipation and the common cold. Our work in tuberculosis is most important. Much of this we desire to teach the public so that we may overcome the ravages of this tuberculosis—How to get well—Protecting others from tuberculosis and that no chronic disease is more easily cured than tuberculosis if discovered in early stage. Preventive medicine seeks to eliminate the cause and cure of pellagra.

Included in this phase of preventive medicine is mental hygiene. This phase of medicine is becoming more and more aware of the fact that the well being of the individual is deeply influenced by state of mind.

Another phase of modern preventive medicine is the effort to get to the process which tends to wear down our bodies either due to chronic disease or to the wear and tear of age. In this phase of preventive medicine the aim is to take care of the body in health, to use and develop the resources we do have, that we may protect ourselves against the ravages of disease and time.

THREE HOG PROJECTS FOR ALABAMA GROWERS

AUBURN, Ala.—Three hog projects—the market hog project, the feeder pig project, and the contest litter project—are being conducted in Alabama this year, announced E. W. Burns, extension livestock specialist, who briefly describes each project as follows:

The market hog project is intended for beginners who have had very little experience with hogs and who have only a limited amount of money to put into the project. This work should furnish an excellent market for much home-grown feed and also should show a nice profit for the club member.

The feeder pig project is intended for club members who have demonstrated their ability to feed and care for hogs properly. These boys should be able to furnish market hogs for their county fair and also must buy their hogs and can also furnish breeding stock to farmers in the county.

The ton-litter project is designed for farmers and club members who have ample feed and who wish to produce hogs, using the best methods of feeding and management available. It also gives state-wide publicity to purebred hog breeders and will do much to assist them in the sale of breeding stock. This project should be profitable to all contestants.

Interested farmers and 4-H club members may obtain further information about each or all of the projects from their county agents.

FARMERS ARE ADVISED PLANT SEED FATCHES

AUBURN, Ala.—Planting seed patches seems to offer Alabama farmers their best opportunity of solving their annual planting seed problem, report officials of the Alabama Extension Service.

"Lespedeza seed are scarce and high in price but farmers can solve their lespedeza seed problem by planting a small patch and producing their own planting seed for 1937," says J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist.

Farmers are also being advised to plant seed patches of the better varieties of cotton for producing their 1937 planting seed.

The grower with crimson clover on his land this spring should reserve a seed patch for producing seed for planting next fall.

The extension workers also state that farmers "have a wonderful opportunity of increasing kudzu production by immediately setting out a few crowns and permitting them to produce other crowns for setting during future years."

GOVERNOR RETURNS TO JOB FOLLOWING ATTACK OF FLU

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Mar. 9—Gov. Bibb Graves, still weak from an extended attack of influenza, was back at his desk Monday for the first time since February 21 but remained on the job only 45 minutes.

The chief executive returned to Montgomery Sunday from his seaside home following a relapse which has been confined with influenza for more than two weeks.

After conferring for a half hour with department heads, he chatted a moment with newspaper men, and said he planned to work only a brief period daily until his strength returned.

And while he was talking, Mrs. Graves called from the mansion to remind him he had only 10 minutes left to finish his business before returning home.

TWELVE LIVING CHILDREN IS 10-YEAR RECORD OF COUPLE

ANDALUSIA, Ala., March 7.—Leaders in Canada's baby derby should be happy that Mr. and Mrs. Marion Thomas, of Andalusia, were not competitors for the prize offered by the couple raising the most babies from October 11, 1926, and October 14, 1936.

The 10-year-old mother presented the happy father, 32, with twins February 29, to run their score to 12 living children.

Despite hardships, the father has kept his family and wants no relief from the government. With an oxen, he plows his 15-acre farm and Andalusia says the five old est children to school.

Mrs. Dell Hart, local welfare director, has tried in vain to find the healthy children scampering about the farm; the mother in the home will be found well and happy.

The father told Mrs Hart he appreciated any assistance, but did not want relief from the government.

OLDEST ELECTRIC TROLLEY SYSTEM IS ABANDONED

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Mar. 9—The world's oldest commercial electric trolley system had passed into the junk heap today and modern gasoline buses had taken the place of the lumbering street cars which first rolled along Montgomery's streets on April 15, 1886.

Special ceremonies, with 2,500 persons gathered in historic Court Square, yesterday marked the "last run" of an electric trolley in Alabama's capital.

Miss Toccoa Cozart, the first woman to ride one of the "remodeled" mule cars in 1886, was aboard the last car, as were digitaries and "old timers" of the street railway system.

"Levee Will Be Completed" Is Assurance Given Elbians By Administrator Hopkins

"Elba's levee will be completed."

This is the positive statement brought to the citizens of Elba from Administrator Harry L. Hopkins at Washington by Mayor L. F. Mullins and Prof. Jas. C. Dixon, president of the Chamber of Commerce, who returned from the Capital City Saturday afternoon.

A full account of the trip and the several conferences had was given to the members of the Chamber of Commerce at the regular meeting held Tuesday evening.

The completion of the levee work will not interfere with the various projects now in course of construction in the county, under direction of the Works Progress Administration, although several letters were received throughout the county Saturday by county officials and others to the effect that proper consideration is given the levee project in the future.

Several weeks ago it was promised that work on concreting a portion of the levee already finish ed would be commenced right away, but so far nothing has been done about this work. Several delegations from here have assurance from the State administrator, Mr. Ray Crow, that this work, costing approximately $10,000.00, would be done. Further than this no promise has ever been made.

Now that assurance has come from Mr. Hopkins in a personal message, citizens of Elba feel that the project will be finished and have greatly assured before the heavy rains of the late fall and early spring. Its completion will banish the fears of another flood such as was experienced just seven years ago last Saturday.

FLORIDA YOUTH FOUND DEAD NEAR OZARK LAST THURSDAY

OZARK, Ala., March 12.—A man authorities said had cards on his body giving the name of Jack Harder, St. Petersburg, Fla., was found dead beside his automobile 18 miles from Ozark Thursday morning, a bullet wound through the heart.

Coroner Kenneth Holman of Dale County and the man's wallet and watch were missing, and that he apparently was shot while sitting at the wheel of his car.

A bullet had pierced the windshield, and passed through the man's body into the back of the seat. Glass on the clothing led officers to conclude he was shot from outside.

Coroner Holman said the man had a gun in his hand with three empty shells and two more in the magazine.

The lights were burning on the car and the ignition had not been cut off, and the motor was in high gear. Officers said apparently the man stepped from his car after being shot and fell dead, as the bullet struck.

A witness who heard shots about 5:30 a.m. this morning has been located by officers, who were investigating the slaying.

Hamp Nolan, living a quarter of a mile from the spot where the body was found, told authorities he heard several shots, but was uncertain how many. It was Nolan who found the body and notified authorities.

The body was found head down in a ditch, with both hands under it, and the revolver, but the wrapped in a handkerchief, clasped in the right hand.

Dale County authorities were advised by Pinellas authorities that the whereabouts of Harder's wife are unknown. There were no pasners by at the address carried in the wallet, but it yielded two empty shells and a picture of Harder and a girl.

About People and Things

By C. B. McDowell

FOLSOM MEETING—A good-sized crowd of Folsom-for-Congress supporters assembled in the Elba circuit court room last Friday night. Speeches were made by Judge J. A. Carnley, F. H. Talbot, John M. Garrett, Frank Rainer and others. All were enthusiastic in their endorsement of James E. Folsom's candidacy for Congress from the Third Congressional District and reported that optimistic reports are being received from all over the district. Judge Carnley urged that all political factionalism be eliminated and the whole county present a united front and put forth every effort to elect the first Coffee County man who has ever been a candidate for Congress. It is quite generally remarked that seldom if ever before in the history of Elba and Coffee County politics has the absence of factionalism been so conspicuous by its absence. The other speakers voiced similar sentiments and a spirit of enthusiasm and optimism prevailed.

Committees were appointed with the avowed purpose of carrying on intensive campaign in Coffee County and in the remaining seven counties of the Third District. Candidate Folsom returned to Elba Saturday from a trip around over the District and reports an encouraging response from the voters at all points visited.

FISH SUPPER—The membership contest which has been on foot for the past several weeks between the reds and blues, divisions of the members of the Men's Bible Class which meets every Sunday morning in the circuit court room, culminated in a fish supper last Friday night. The victorious reds were unanimously entertained by the losing but militant Blues. The feast was spread in the American Legion mess room, on the south side of the public square, a large number of members and spectators taking part. After all had eaten to their canacity, there was a social. Visitors were called on to help clean up the fragments.

ALL IS ROSY—Latest reports indicate that all of the WPA projects in and around Elba will go on as before. Some of the projects now will be resumed, probably some time during the late Summer or early Fall. Last week was a time of ups and downs in the barometer of local hopes. Soon after the arrival in Washington of Mayor L. P. Mullins and Prof. J. C. Dixon, who were sent to the Capital by the Elba Chamber of Commerce, a telegram was received here from them that they had successfully interviewed Public Works Director Harry Hopkins and that he had promised them that the levee would be completed. When Mayor Mullins and Professor Dixon returned home Saturday they found the barometer reading quite low as a result of the following letter received by J. W. Wirtz, secretary of the Elba Chamber of Commerce, from W. G. Henderson, Director Third District, Works Progress Administration:

"I have just received orders from the State Administrator, Works Progress Administration, directing me to give preference to the Elba levee construction in your county.

"This is to advise that this letter will necessitate a shut-down of the Armory project at Enterprise, the Armory project at Elba, the Vocational School project at Elba, the three-way Highway project from Elba toward Lavonne.

"I am giving you this information so that you, as a sponsor of these projects, may be informed in advance as to further operations in Coffee County."

Disconcerting as this letter was to our citizenship, our go-getting Mayor and City School Superintendent refused to be nonplussed or flabbergasted, so they immediately wired Mr. Hopkins at Washington, informing him of the situation. A telegram from the WPA Director was received at noon Monday assuring them that the projects now in course of construction are to proceed without interruption and that the levee will be completed immediately following. As Mayor Mullins and Professor Dixon had explained to Mr. Hopkins that there is no immediate danger of a flood at Elba at this season of the year and that the people of Elba will be satisfied to wait until after the projects now in course of construction are completed as assurance is given that the levee work will start at that time. Mayor Mullins is also in receipt of a wire stating that 160 men, dragline, power shovel and 20 trucks will be able to complete the levee in about ten days. With the approximately $140,000 appropriated by Congress and the amount to be contributed by the City of Elba, amounting to something like $16,000, it is the opinion of those in position to judge that the work can be prosecuted to a satisfactory conclusion in time to make our city safe from possible flood waters before the usual rainy season comes.
